

NEW LENOX SERVICE FLAG DEDICATION

Sudden Death of Orland Resident Shocks Community

The many friends of Mrs. John Helenhouse of Orland Park were deeply shocked and grieved to hear of her sudden illness and death.

Mrs. Helenhouse was taken seriously ill last Wednesday morning. She had prepared the noon day meal when taken ill and phoned her husband at his barbershop to hurry home. She was given immediate medical attention but did not respond to the treatment. She was taken to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet where she underwent a major operation Friday, and Saturday morning she took a turn for the worse and shortly afterward passed away.

Mrs. Helenhouse, nee Caroline Marti, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Marti, Mokena. She was born Nov. 7, 1889 at Mokena, and was united in marriage with John Helenhouse of Orland Park in 1908.

After a brief residence in Mokena they located in Orland Park where Mr. Helenhouse was conducting a barbershop and has for many years. To this union one son Harold, was born. Surviving are the husband, the son, 5 brothers Frank Marti of Mokena, Alvin, New Lenox, Geo. and Irvin, Mokena, Wm., Joliet, 2 sisters, Mrs. Gladys Crate and Mrs. Catherine Crate both of New Lenox.

Funeral services were held from the late home in Orland Park, Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, concluding at the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena with Rev. Theo. Haeffele of Lyons, Ill. officiating. Interment was made in St. John's cemetery Mokena.

That Mrs. Helenhouse enjoyed a wide circle of friends was attested by the large outpouring of friends who called at the home and attended the services. The floral tributes were profuse and exceedingly beautiful. Members of the Lemont Fire Department and various other organizations came to express their sympathy to the bereaved and to pay their last respects to the departed. Mrs. Helenhouse was a life long member of the Mokena Sunbeam camp of Royal Neighbors.

Mr. Helenhouse is the former Orland Park Fire Chief and has been active in many civic affairs.

NEWS-BULLETIN GOING TO BOYS IN SERVICE OF U. S.

For the past month, the News Bulletin has been sent free by its Editor to all men from Mokena who are in the armed forces. The Auxiliary to the Wm. Martin Post VFW of Mokena is paying the postage on these papers, addressing the wrappers and maintaining a file of the addresses of each man in the Service. Incidentally, the wrappers have been so far addressed by Miss Dolly Hensel.

But as the men change camp as they progress in their training and service, it is necessary that as soon as the home folks receive the change of address from them, to either send a postcard or call Mrs. M. Larson, Mokena 2141 or Mrs. Fred Hentsch, Mokena 2141 or Mrs. Fred Hentsch, this mailing file and give them the new address.

If the papers are sent out to a wrong address the boys do not get it, but the News-Bulletin gets a card from the government with the new address for which there is a charge of 2c on each such card. The VFW Auxiliary pays this 2c but we would much rather the boys would not miss the paper because of a wrong address.

So home folks, help us in this mailing job by giving the corrected address to the above named women as soon as you get it.

But this does not prevent you Service men from sending your new address direct, if you care to do so, either to Mrs. Larson or Mrs. Hentsch.

Editors note: Sure nice of you men to write us. We appreciate your appreciation and we like to hear from you. And we also appreciate your calls in person at our office when you have been home on furlough, at your own little Home Town paper. Lots of good luck to you all every where.

THOUSANDS OF GALLONS OF GAS SOLD LAST WEEK

Last weekend, Sunday and Monday were hectic days for filling stations and bulk gasoline stations. Every car owner and many farmers and truck drivers filled up their tanks to capacity to be ahead of the gas rationing deadline. Gasoline delivery trucks delivered thousands of gallons of gasoline to local filling stations as well as making deliveries to farmers for their trucks and tractors, running all day, Sunday and Monday.

The rationing boards have inflicted big cuts in gas allotment and many truck drivers say they cannot operate very long on the amount of gas granted them. Store delivery trucks are also hard hit as well as milk delivery trucks. In Mokena a local dairyman has only been granted 2 quarts of gasoline a day to operate his milk delivery truck. He has appealed to the rationing board for an increased allowance as 2 quarts are not sufficient to permit him to operate his delivery truck over his entire territory.

Fuel oil users in many instances have not received notices as to the amount of oil which will be allotted them nor have received their coupon books. In this matter fuel users are signing promissory notes with the fuel oil dealers who will receive the required coupons soon as the consumers receive their coupon books. Homes having fireplaces in which wood or coal can be burned are using them to save on the fuel oil supply.

THEIR BIRTHDAYS CAME ON SAME DATE

Wednesday, December 2 was the birthday of a number of Mokena people including Lois Guindon, Mrs. Margaret O'Brien, Mrs. Irvin Howes and Frederick Clark.

When the government asked farmers for increased production a year ago, Mr. Bormet replanned the entire program of his 280 acre farm—upped corn production 15 percent, increased soy beans 300 percent and increased his herd from 19 to 24 cows. His son Emil gave up a promising career as a professional baseball player to return to the farm, eliminating the need for extra help.

Mine Detector

Mines, which take the place of barbed wire, are playing an important role in the war on the African front. The British mine detector is the best bet to counteract these hidden monsters. When the device detects a mine, certain sounds reach the earphones of the sappers, and they go and render the mine useless. Their work requires an unusually high degree of skill and courage. The detector, until now a little mentioned weapon, played an important part in the recent Allied victory in Egypt. Picture shows a sapper holding a mine detector.

Heads French Fleet

One of the big question marks has been the ultimate destination of the French fleet, which was anchored at Toulon. Admiral Laborde (above), commander of the fleet, was quoted by Vichy as having declared allegiance to Marshal Petain.

THE cost of a handsome pair of cushions will be little if you shop around for remnants of satin or brocade; and for harmonizing crepe or taffeta to make a fold edge as shown here in the sketch. A yard will make two 18-inch cushion tops and the same amount for bottoms. Five-eighths yard of crepe or taffeta will make the fold around both cushions.

If you want to change feathers from old cushions, leave a three-inch opening in the old ticking; sew the larger opening over the smaller one and then work the feathers into the new ticking. Rip apart carefully and sew the new ticking with close stitches.

NOTE: Smart cushions also may be made by combining smaller pieces of silk with cording and other finishes. Book 4, of Mrs. Spears' series of homemaking booklets, shows how this is done. Book 5 contains grand ideas for cushions of bur-lap, old silk stockings and gay cottons. Booklets are 10 cents each. Address:

"Well, you tell her anyway! Good-by!" Amy was gone in a trail of excited laughter. Cherry heard Gogo's rich, low voice in the lower hall, then the front door closed, and Martin walked back alone.

"What's the excitement?" Fran called through her half-opened door. Cherry went slowly in.

"Amy was married today in Reno."

"She wasn't!" Fran exclaimed. "Yes, she was. The morning papers will have it, if the evening ones don't. There's no hiding a title like that."

THE Secret OF THE MARSHBANKS

• BY KATHLEEN NORRIS •

W.N.U. RELEASE

"Well, so we have a countess in the family," Mrs. Marshbanks said grimly.

"Pitiful little fool!" Fran said in a whisper. "Of course he's a complete rotter. Jud would have killed him. Old lady know?" she asked, with a jerk of her head in the direction of Mrs. Marshbanks' room.

"Amy just told her."

"Wild?"

"I imagine so. I believe she said that there was a curse on the family."

"I believe there is!" Fran said gloomily, staring into space. "They'll never find out who murdered Jud. But," she added, "you can be pretty sure that the police are keeping an eye on that precious Gogo."

"Gogo had a motive," Cherry said. "Not only was the judge violently opposed to Amy's marrying him, but what he was discussing that very night with her and with his mother and with me was—you knew something about that, Fran?"

"I couldn't be in this house without knowing something about it. It was some claim that your aunt made—something she said about Fred Marshbanks' will? Of course, that was all long before I came into the family, but Jud did tell me—did tell me about his brother Fred, and that—you don't mind my mentioning it?"

"That Fred Marshbanks was my father? Oh, no. I seem to have known that for a long, long time. But there was more to it than that. There was a will, drawn up by Judge Thomas Comstock. Nobody knew what was in that. But Mrs. Marshbanks burned it. She wouldn't risk Amy's being hurt or any of her money taken away."

"So," Fran said musingly, "Amy and Gogo had their motives for getting rid of Jud, and certainly old Mrs. Marshbanks had. If you believe what some old dodo of an English judge once said, I had. He said that between married couples there might always be motive. I don't see that you had."

There was a pause, then Fran said suddenly, "Kelly might have had a motive."

"Kelly!" Cherry echoed, her voice suddenly failing.

"Well, if you're searching for motives. And that wasn't quite what I meant anyway," Fran said. "What I meant was that Kelly didn't have an alibi."

"But, Fran—you certainly don't think—you certainly can't think that Kelly—"

"No, I don't," Fran interrupted promptly. "The police didn't hold him; just took his statement and let it go at that. You can tell by the way he acts that Kelly doesn't know anything about it. And at the same time—that's what's bothering me," she added.

"What's bothering you?" Cherry asked apprehensively.

"Oh, it's making me sick! I don't know whether to tell you or not."

"Tell me what?" Cherry managed to ask, with a sinking heart.

"You might as well know. After you went out this morning the man named Mullins asked me to step into the library. He had a flat little packet of letters in his hand; he asked me if I recognized them. I said yes, certainly. They were the letters Kelly Coates wrote me last year. About a dozen of them. Love letters."

Cherry felt faint.

"How'd they get them?"

"I haven't the slightest idea," Fran said. "I hid them two weeks ago, the day after Jud was killed. I slipped them into the lining of my dressing case. It had come loose, and that morning I complained to Molly about it, and while she was right here in the room I pasted it with glue."

"What sort of letters are they?"

Cherry asked, with the world gone suddenly black.

"Love letters. Letters that will look bad if they're given to the newspapers, I can tell you that. What he and I could do if we were free, frantic sort of letters. He said—Mullins said—that they were very incriminating."

"But they couldn't suspect Kelly!"

"These letters won't help Kelly," Fran said dryly. She had finished the slow business of oils, pastes, powders, rouge for her face, eye-lashes, brows.

The ballooning of a negligee distracted her. The door of Fran's big closet was open, and within the closet the window must be open, too, for the row of garments neatly aligned upon hangers was in great agitation.

Cherry went in and shut the window, and coming back, picked up the negligee that had fallen and restored it to its hanger. She hated the sight of it; that was what Fran had worn on the night of the tragedy; she had had on this negligee as she ran downstairs ahead of them all.

Cherry stopped short, stood with a suddenly arrested breath, with icy fear touching her spine. The negligee was slightly rumpled in one of its folds. It had been squeezed together, loosened again. It had wiped something oily and dark, something metallic, something thick and liquid that was stained with black.

A trifling discoloration, the size of a woman's finger possibly. Not noticeable at all, unless one happened to look straight at it as Cherry was looking now. A crumpled tiny circle, as if the cloth had been forced into a small tube, a tube as small as a pistol barrel, a finger-sized smudge that might have been made by the oil from that barrel, by the blackness of gunpowder.

When Cherry went downstairs old Mrs. Marshbanks had had breakfast and was sitting by the fire reading the papers that announced the marriage of Amy Marshbanks to Count Constantino the day before. Greg was reading the sports news.

"Well, so we have a countess in the family," Mrs. Marshbanks said grimly.

"She had said she would," Cherry said. "And I suppose that under the circumstances she wouldn't have wanted a big wedding."

"He wouldn't have wanted a big wedding," the old woman said darkly; "the less publicity the better for him!"

"He may really be in love with Amy," Cherry offered, feeling that now the mischief was done there was no particular object in maligning him.

"It'll cost Amy just about a hundred grand," said Greg, from behind the paper. "Fran says he's asked her for money already."

"No, he didn't ask her, really; she made him take it. She told me so. She had a balance at the bank, and she split it with him."

"The most generous little heart in the world," mourned Amy's grandmother.

Unbelievable as it might appear, Cherry and old Mrs. Marshbanks were amicably conversing.

Only yesterday Cherry had learned of the existence of those love letters from Kelly to Fran. Cherry was heartsick. He had told her that he loved her, but only a few months ago he had loved Fran, too; how could matters ever be straightened out now, so that her trust in him could be restored?

Yesterday's second shock had been the discovery that the gown Fran had been wearing upon the fatal night of the murder had been stained with unmistakable marks of gunpowder and gun oil. Fran must have been living in terror of its discovery.

Lying awake in the night, Cherry had seen that fatal little stain in her mind's eyes, had remembered detail by detail the horrors of that dark night when the judge's shout had rung through the house.

Had Fran had on that negligee then? Cherry asked herself. Yes, she thought she had. Certainly she had not had it on a short while afterward, when the police arrived.

This morning Fran came downstairs while Cherry was finishing her breakfast. Like the rest of the household Fran was showing the strain. She sat down and looked at her grapefruit, pushed it restfully away. "Those letters worry me," she said.

"What letters?" asked Mrs. Marshbanks, eyeing the younger woman over her glasses.

"Some letters Kelly Coates wrote me—silly, perfectly harmless letters, but wait until you see what the papers make of them!" Fran answered, impatiently.

Dead Letters from Germany

By Maurice Hindus

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with American Magazine)

These letters, an armful of them, fell in my lap with a rustle like windblown leaves. "Fresh from the front," said my host, a widely known Russian writer. I am in Moscow, hunting for news.

These letters had been gathered from German dead on Don battlefields. The paper was ragged, but the decorative envelopes were of various colors, white, blue, and pink. All were written in Gothic script, many in pencil.

On top of the heap lay a postal card, shiny with two large drops of blood. It was from mother to son. The writing was scarcely legible, but from the few words I could make out, the soldier and his mother loved each other deeply. The blood indicated that the soldier had carried it close to his body.

There was something spectral about this postal card, about all the letters. They seemed like voices from the dead. But they weren't. They were voices from the living—inside Germany.

Russians Collect Letters From Dead

The Russians have collected hundreds of thousands of such letters, and also diaries, from the German dead. These have been read, digested, put away. In the absence of direct relations between the United Nations and Germany, they are the only authentic source of information about Germany and the German people that we now have.

The letters are intimate and personal—from parents to son, from brides to grooms, sisters to brothers, wives to husbands. They are as good a mirror as we have today of Germany, of the conditions of life and state of mind of civilians and soldiers.

85 Per Cent of Letters Ignore Politics

The outstanding feature of this correspondence is that 85 per cent of all the letters completely ignore politics, rarely mentioning the fuhrer or other Nazi chiefs, or referring to Nazi doctrines or practice.

Perhaps this is why military censorship is so lenient. Seldom are there any deletions, even when the writers speak frankly of hardship and sorrow, or of such delicate subjects as the deterioration of the morals of German women.

An Italian named Giovanni Volpi, working in Kufstein, Germany, writes to an Italian soldier at the Russian front: "I'll tell you frankly, German women have lost all control of themselves. They have gone out of their minds."

German Women 'Loose'

So while Germans by the thousands die daily for the supremacy of their race and the purity of their blood, their women at home, despite Nazi ideology and Gestapo vigilance, indulge in no small amount of race defilement. That's one reason, no doubt, why German mothers and fathers show increasing anxiety and bewilderment at the "foreignization" of Germany through the presence of millions of alien laborers and war prisoners.

"You ask me," writes a father to his son, "how Berlin looks these days. Dear Fritz, Berlin has become an international city—you can hear every language in this street."

Vienna is no better. Bettie Schummer writes her husband: "Life is hard in Vienna. The city is crowded with foreigners . . . In the trolleys you hear only Italians, Spaniards, Hungarians, Czechs, Slovaks, Greeks, Bulgarians. Viennese are hardly seen."

Religious Folk Air Complaints.

Most of the letters are filled with complaints. Religious people feel hurt because the church bells have been melted into cannons. Now and then there's a letter about the treatment of elderly people which tells most by what it leaves unsaid. There are endless complaints of hardships.

The information in letters found on the German dead, intimate and personal as it is, leads to some striking deductions. The people inside Germany hate the war and want it to end. They are tired of hardships, sick of sacrifice. They lament the moral disintegration of their young women; they shudder at air raids; they weep over their dead.

But nowhere do they betray the least suggestion of German guilt or regret for horrors which the German armies perpetrate.

Hard as is their life, they know neither starvation nor desperation. Nor do they expect Germany to lose the war. To expect them at this time to revolt against Hitler is as futile and puerile as to expect the fuhrer to live up to his promises or the treaties he signs.

The Allies airman has made himself very unpopular in Germany. He is to Germans the "supreme villain" of today. They hate him.

Floating Ice

Ice floats because, unlike other substances, when water reaches freezing point it ceases to contract as cold things usually do, and inexplicably starts to expand. This, of course, makes it lighter, and so it floats to the surface, because its mass must remain the same.

If water did not expand when it turned into ice the seas and lakes would be permanently frozen, except for a few feet of water at the top, for only the surface receives the heat rays of the sun, and ice that had sunk would never thaw.

Farm Youth Is Wiring Wizard; Cited By State

Glen Eisenbrandt, 17 year old farm youth who has been a member of the Frankfort-New Lenox 4-H Club since he was nine, is an electrical "wizard" in his spare time. Between chores and working in the fields, he has accomplished such feats as rewiring a nine room farm house and repairing a permanent wave machine. As a result, he was selected last week at Urbana as state champion in the annual rural electrification contest and Illinois candidate for national honors.

A year ago Glen's family moved from the nearby community to a 250 acre rented farm near Lockport. The farmhouse, barn, milk house, and garage were badly in need of electrical repair work. He took over and completed the job alone, adding a yard light made from an old reflector and some discarded materials.

Since then neighbors have fallen into the habit of calling Glen for all kinds of electrical odd jobs. He has worked on everything from a permanent wave machine, which he placed in top condition, to old refrigerators, welders and washing machines headed for the junk heap.

He was one of the scholarship winners who attended the electrification course held for 4-H club members at the University of Illinois in December 1941. He also has been active in judging work and a member of the National Honor Society in school.

One of several 4-H club members chosen for outstanding honors at the state meeting in Urbana, Glen will be a candidate for a $200 college scholarship offered by the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing company to the six top ranking contenders in the national competition.

FRANKFORT

PROCLAMATION

"The seventh day of December closes a 12 month period momentous for our village, state and nation. This date is the first anniversary of the day our Navy was treacherously attacked at Pearl Harbor. It marks the close of the first year of our all out war for American Ideals, American security, and American liberty.

It seems fitting that this day be used as remembering the American boys who have already made the supreme sacrifice, freshen our sense of duty and pledge ourselves anew to redouble our efforts in the great tasks that lie ahead.

Now, therefore, I, George Sangmeister, village president, do hereby proclaim Monday, December seventh of the present year, as Pearl Harbor Day, not as a holiday, but as a time of remembrance.

In witness thereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the village of Frankfort to be affixed." Signed, George C. Sangmeister.

Handel's famous oratorio, "The Messiah" will be presented Sunday evening, December 13 at 7:30 o'clock in the First Methodist church of Chicago Heights under the auspices of the Music Department of the Chicago Heights Woman's Club. Mrs. George Andrew announced at the Frankfort Woman's Club meeting last Tuesday that plans have been made to organize a Red Cross Home Nursing Class under the instruction of Miss Florence Holsetin, former superintendent of nurses at Silver Cross hospital. No date has been set for the first meeting but it is not likely to get under way before the holidays.

Instead of a program which was to have been given in the school gymnasium to mark the first anniversary of our Nation's attack at Pearl Harbor next Monday, the day will be observed at both local churches on Sunday morning. Village president Geo. Sangmeister has asked Rev. Fler of St. Peter's Evang. church and Rev. R. Malek of the Methodist church to speak on Pearl Harbor Day. He also requested all residents to display the flag on Monday.

Four applications for membership were accepted at last Tuesday's meeting of the Frankfort Volunteer Fire Department. They will be announced at the December meeting at which time there will be an election of officers. The organization is considering the purchase of an inhalator and a demonstration of one will be made at this meeting.

Members of the Victory Club will meet tomorrow at the home of Juanita Waldvogel.

AMERICANS OPPOSED TO SOCIALISM

According to one of the leading public opinion only 41 per cent of the American people are definitely opposed to Socialism. Thirty eight per cent definitely favored some form of collectivism and 34 per cent were not even sufficiently interested to express an opinion. And these are the same people whose best men are fighting a bloody global war to defeat socialism! They are the same people who wave the flag with pounding hearts at pep meetings. They are the same people who man our lonely spotter posts or who carry on the tasks of civilian defense. And they are the same people that are working long hours in our war industries.

Such confusion of ideals is beyond understanding. The Saturday Evening Post brutally sums up the situation: "For centuries, technological advancement has made the individual less and less capable of organizing and directing his own work. Hence, someone else must direct it. The only two agencies that can do this are, 1, the private enterprisers, using free labor, and 2, the government, using Hitler's type of labor. We must choose between freedom and state control. Those who say that the people can collectively direct their own industrial efforts are either liars or fools."

The Post then observed that there is one rock of truth to which the common man can cling amid the involved political and economic issues surrounding him, one pillar of freedom which is the key to all freedom: "Economic freedom. The freedom to develop his productive abilities, sell them to the highest bidder and retain for himself and his family a fair share of the benefits. When this freedom is destroyed, the entire democratic structure goes with it."

It is time we kicked our pseudo liberals and 'frontier thinkers' upstairs. They have no faith either in the American people or their institutions. And in this day wars are not won and freedom retained by people with out faith in freedom.

ACCIDENT TOLL GREATER THAN WAR CASUALTIES

The casualties to the U. S. armed forces from Pearl Harbor to Nov. 15, excluding the African campaign, have been 5,694 dead, 3,435 wounded and 39,827 missing or prisoners, a total of 48,956. These figures are from the government.

Casualties to American workers through accidents in the same period have been 44,500 dead and 3,800,000 wounded. These figures are from the National Safety Council.

The total American accident toll since Pearl Harbor has been 89,000 killed and approximately 8,800,000 wounded the Council said. Among the victims are thousands of skilled workers and key men in the nation's war program, who cannot be replaced. Those who fall in battle die for a cause. Those struck down by accidents die in vain.

It is the duty of every patriotic American to conserve manpower for victory. We must stop accidents.

ROCK ISLAND AUTHORIZED TO PREPAY INSTALLMENTS

J. D. Farrington, Chief Executive Officer of the Rock Island Lines, announced that Federal Court Judge Michael L. Igoe had authorized the Trustees of that road to prepay principal installments aggregating $5,336,533 on two conditional sales agreements covering the cost of new equipment which was purchased to meet the war demands. The prepayment of these installments, which otherwise would run until the year 1949, will reduce the Rock Island's outstanding equipment indebtedness approximately 20 percent and will place the road in a more favorable position with respect to these obligations.

WHY SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD SHOULD BE NOTIFIED OF ANY CHANGES MADE

"It has come to the attention of the Harvey, Ill. Social Security field office that many persons who have social security account numbers have changed their names through marriage or for other reasons and have never notified the Social Security Board," manager of the Harvey field office said today. It is advisable to notify the Board of any corrections that should be made in data on application blanks, such as date of birth, mother's and father's name, and of all changes in name, he pointed out.

All residents of the south Cook county area, Cook County, south of 130th Street, include Blue Island, and south of 119th street in the Calumet Park district, may apply at the field office, 178 E. 154th St., Harvey, Ill., for a change in records form. Milton C. Walters, Manager, said that those applying for a change in name should bring their account number cards. If the card is lost, a duplicate may be requested at the same time. A record of the number should be kept until a new account number card bearing the corrected name is received by the wage earner from the central office of the Board. The employer should also be informed of the change so that the name reported by him will be the same as shown on the corrected number card. It is not necessary to report changes of address.

SOME INFORMATION ON FLAXSEED PRODUCTION IN ILLINOIS AS GIVEN BY THE AGRICULTURE EXPERIMENT STATION AT URBANA.

TIME OF SEEDING—

Seed early for best results.

RATE OF SEEDING—

45 to 56 pounds per acre.

DEPTH OF SEEDING—

1/2 to 1 inch deep.

ALFALFA—

Flax makes an excellent nurse crop for Alfalfa.

IS FLAX HARD ON THE LAND?

Below is a chart comparing Flax with other Grain crops.

CROP	Fertilizing Constituents in Lbs. per Acre Removed by the Yield Indicated
	Bus.	Ni.	Phos.	Pot.	Cal.	Mag.
Flaxseed	11.3	20.8	3.6	5.1	1.1	1.7
Corn	67.9	68.5	10.3	12.9	.7	4.9
Oats	66.4	41.6	7.7	10.2	1.7	2.5
Sp. Wheat	20.7	27.3	5.2	5.3	.5	1.9
Soy Beans	30.9	103.3	12.8	35.4	3.7	5.6
Barley	40.2	35.5	7.1	9.1	1.0	2.3
Rye	31.6	33.1	6.5	8.7	.7	1.8

According to the above data, flax removed less nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and magnesium than any other grain crop. Soy beans removed about five times as much as flaxseed.

Grow a crop you can harvest in the summer, one that is easy on the land, and one that you can sell for cash at the crushers at Chicago Heights. Field-run flaxseed sold for about $2.50 per bushel (56 lbs.) this season.

We have a good supply of home-grown Bison Flaxseed on hand which yielded about 20 bushels per acre.

Here are some tips on cleaning your lamp shades...to make them look new and bright

American housewives, restricted by scarcities and more interested in putting extra cash into War Bonds, are making old things about the house do double duty. There was a time when a dirty lamp shade meant a trip to the store for a new one, but now the picture is changed. Modern American housewives now look for a way to repair and renew the nice things they have, to keep their homes bright and shining at minimum expense.

One direct way to a bright, cozy home is to have clean lamp shades. Read these easy rules on cleaning them up safely, as recommended by our Home Lighting Advisors.

FIRST: Most fabric shades which are sewed are washable. Shades which are glued on, painted or made with materials that shrink when wet are not washable. Shades which are held with glue can be dry cleaned.

SECOND: Before washing remove all loose dust with a soft brush, and tie a cord on the wire at the top long enough for hanging the shade. Then make a sudsy solution of warm water and completely dissolved mild soap flakes. If the top or bottom is especially soiled, dip a soft brush in the water and brush lightly. Then dip the entire shade up and down in the soapy solution a number of times.

THIRD: After removing shade from soapy water, immediately rinse thoroughly in clear warm water (which has been prepared beforehand) by dipping up and down. Large tubs such as basement laundry tubs or bathtubs are ideal for shade washing.

FOURTH: Dry by hanging shade from clothes line by means of cord. Fast drying is essential to prevent the metal frame from rusting. Do not hang in sunshine or near artificial heat. Wind blowing through the shade will dry it quickly and evenly.

This advertisement is published by the undersigned Tappan Gregory, as officer for the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, pursuant to a decree of that court entered September 3, 1942, in Cause No. 7454, as amended.

The court is preparing to make a refund to eligible customers of the above named utilities who were ultimate consumers during the 20-month period from August, 1940 to March, 1942, inclusive (known as the "refund period") of the gas supplied by Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America. Under the court's decree of September 3, 1942, as amended, providing for refunds, industrial gas users are excluded from participating in the refund, and gas used for house or space heating will largely be excluded in determining the amounts of individual refunds.

The following four paragraphs will indicate whether or not you are called upon to reply to this advertisement:

1. If you recently received a notice from the undersigned stating that according to the records of the utility mentioned in such notice you received gas service from it during the entire 20-month refund period, you should not reply to this advertisement with respect to the service covered by such notice.

2. If the recent notice from the undersigned to you stated that according to the records of the utility mentioned in such notice you received gas service from it during only a part of the 20-month refund period, and if that information was correct, or if in reply to that notice you informed the undersigned of other addresses at which you received gas service from that utility during the 20-month refund period, you should not reply to this advertisement with respect to the service covered by such notice.

3. If you received gas service (except industrial gas service) from one or more of the other utilities named in this advertisement (in addition to the utility mentioned in the notice you recently received from the undersigned) during a part or all of the 20-month refund period, and if you have not already communicated to the undersigned the addresses at which you received gas service from such other utilities, then you should reply to this advertisement, giving information in the manner outlined below.

4. If you received gas service (except industrial gas service) from one or more of the above named utilities during a part or all of said 20-month refund period but have not received any notice from the undersigned and have not communicated with him as to when and from what utility you received gas service during that period, you should reply to this advertisement, giving information in the manner outlined below.

If you determine, in accordance with the above, that you should reply to this advertisement, please write on the coupon set out below (1) the name of the utility from which you received gas service during the 20-month refund period of which the undersigned is not, or has not been, previously advised, (2) the address or addresses at which you received such service from that utility during the 20-month refund period, and (3) your present address; and mail the coupon to the undersigned.

If you find it necessary to furnish information regarding gas service received during the 20-month refund period from more than one of the above named utilities, you should reply on separate pieces of paper giving the information as to gas service received by you from each of such utilities.

Unless information to be furnished by you in reply to this advertisement is received by the undersigned within five (5) days from the date of this advertisement, it will necessarily be disregarded in determining your eligibility to receive a refund or the extent of your participation in it.

The individual refunds will be small, varying with (1) the number of months within the 20-month refund period during which the customer received service, (2) the normal billing to such customer within a monthly billing period occurring between the dates of September 3 and October 31, 1942, and (3) the number of months within the refund period during which the particular utility received natural gas from Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America.

Your cooperation in furnishing information if required by this advertisement is respectfully invited. All information received by the undersigned will be carefully checked and every reasonable effort will be made to arrive at an accurate determination of your eligibility to participate in the refund, and the extent of your participation.

Refund checks will be issued by the Clerk of the Court to the eligible customers of each utility. Where the service was received by the customer at more than one address, the refund to such customer may be made by more than one check.

THE OLD GUARD REPORTS

IT IS reported to be a "long way to Tipperary." Also, it is a long way from Walter Camp's first All-America football team. That selection was made in 1889, which is a matter of 53 years back in football history or any history. In sport this is something you can call faraway and long ago.

Naturally one gets a thrill when he runs across one of the few left from that old-time outfit, such as Pudge Heffelfinger of Yale, still my top football player. I mean a star in 1889 at the age of 20, and still a star (ask Bo McMillin) in 1922, 33 years later. And I mean a 60-minute star.

So there was something of a thrill in meeting Channing of Princeton, and in looking back into the past. Channing of Princeton was also on Mr. Camp's first team—a running mate of Snake Ames, one of the star college athletes of all time, a slender back who had to take the physical beating of mass play for 60 minutes every game.

Then and Now

"There isn't any question at all," Mr. Channing told me, "that modern football is far superior to the game we played. It is faster, smarter, more interesting. It has greater action."

"In those days we never had to bother with forward passes, reverses, spinners, moustestrapping, changing defenses, wing backs, T-formations and a dozen things I might mention that the modern player has to face."

"We had only three factors to consider then—power, speed and durability. We never had to figure in advance all the complex things that might happen to an offense or a defense. Actually, we never had to think much. It was largely a matter of overpowering the other team by power and speed. The modern game is a far better game for everybody—players and spectators."

'We Were Tougher'

"We had just one advantage over this present bunch," 1889 All-America Channing said. "Undoubtedly we were tougher. We could take more. In those days we had no automobiles, no night clubs, no motion pictures, no radios, no distractions. We had only football."

"I'll give you several examples. Pudge Heffelfinger was on that 1889 All-America. Thirty-three years later he played 60 minutes in a professional game with Bo McMillin in Ohio, and he was still the roughest, toughest man in that game. He played against the best pros of 1921 and 1922 and he turned them into tenpins."

"Talk about running guards. Pudge was a great running guard in 1889. And he was 53 and McMillin was 22 when they played together, yet Pudge kept saying to Bo, 'More speed, kid. Don't get in my way.' And McMillin was one of the best and one of the toughest, in a football way, this game ever has known."

"Pudge dislocated his right shoulder in the first play of that game, but still starred through the whole distance."

More Evidence

"I'll give you more evidence that we could take it," Mr. Channing said. "Shep Homans was Snake Ames' substitute at fullback for Princeton, but Shep never got to play a second while Snake was around. After Snake had been graduated, Homans was All-America for two years at fullback, and in 18 games his substitute never got into a game—not even for a play."

"We were 60-minute players then. I mean all of us. Heffelfinger, Hare, Ames, Staggs—don't forget Staggs. At 80 he is still just as active, just as alert, just as keen as he was over 50 years ago."

"I'd like to tell you more about such great people as Brink Thorne and Frank Hinkley. Hinkley weighed a hundred and fifty pounds, and they thought he was too rough. He put 100 per cent of everything he had in every play he made, and so did Ames and Heffelfinger and Thorne and many others."

"At that time the softening influences of modern civilization hadn't come along to help kill off our legs and our stamina. Certainly, the kids today are just as game as we ever were. And they are football smarters."

"Can you pick from this crop today a Staggs who still will be leading his men at the age of 80—or a Heffelfinger who might be playing in a game at 66, as he did for charity in Minneapolis?"

"Yes, they are faster, smarter and more interesting than we ever were. But we were tougher."

Speaking Sports by Bob McMillin

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

FIGURES released by the United States department of commerce prove conclusively that America is the most recreational-minded country in the world. The figures deal with the state of sports in the United States through three different economic periods—boom, depression, and the prewar year.

Hard to believe is the fact that sports attendance soared so high in 1941. The commerce department estimates that $73,000,000 was spent in watching sports in 1929—the boom year. The total dropped to $52,000,000 in 1932 at the depth of the depression and zoomed to $175,000,000 last year.

Baseball turnstiles clicked to the tune of $17,000,000 in 1929, $10,000,000 in 1933 and $20,000,000 in 1941. College football showed a similar gain: $22,000,000 in '29, $20,000,000 in '33 and $48,000,000 in '41.

Bowling has increased 250 per cent in the past 10 years. The 1941 total was more than $94,000,000. Professional football continued to grow despite the depression. In '29 only $700,000 was spent on the game. This grew to $1,000,000 in '33 and to $3,000,000 last year.

'No Decision'

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, former light heavyweight champion who recently lost his final bout to the Grim Reaper, was one of the most colorful of the old-time ringmen. His death revived stories of his famous bout with Stanley Ketchel, the Michigan Assassin.

The Ketchel-O'Brien tilt was a 10-round no-decision affair, fought in New York. Even though the fight ended with O'Brien on the floor, unconscious, he always listed it in his record as a no-decision contest, with the notation that he had been saved by the bell. His followers argued that he actually won the fight, even though unconscious at the end. They claimed (with quite a bit of logic) that O'Brien had the better of the greatest part of the fight and should have been recognized as the winner, regardless of the last few seconds. A rematch settled the argument for a while. Ketchel knocked O'Brien out in three rounds, proving his superiority and saddening the followers of O'Brien.

Corporation

Beau Jack, one-time Negro locker boy of the Augusta, Ga., National golf club and recent winner over Lightweight Allie Stolz, has long been a corporation. Twenty business men had 20 shares in him, but he paid them all off. He is said to work on an allowance of $5 a week, the remainder being banked for him.

When Beau defeated Stolz, the 20 sponsors of his professional ring career honored him at a party in New York. He deserved the honor—Sammy Angott was supposed to be the only man who stood between Stolz and the title.

About the Phils

When the directors of the National league ordered the sale of the Philadelphia Phillies, they did so for one reason—the league is tired of advancing money to the club and refuses to go on doing so.

Ford Frick, president of the National league, pointed out that early stories gave the wrong impression.

"The directors are not after Gerry Nugent's head," he explained. "He has not received a peremptory order to get out. . . . The league is not in a position to give Nugent more financial assistance, and some way must be devised to go on without it. What will happen I honestly do not know."

Franchise Change?

Incidentally, the American league is safe from a recurrence of its annual problem—requests from the Browns for a handout. When the league turned down President Don Barnes last year the club proceeded to make some necessary changes, with the result that it made money.

However, Barnes still believes the day will come when the Browns will represent Los Angeles rather than St. Louis. "After the war the Pacific coast is certain to have big league baseball," Barnes said. When he suggested the franchise shift last year he got a cold shoulder from fellow American league magnates.

Sport Shorts

On the average a referee has to call 125 plays a game.

Colgate's starting right tackle is Bill MacMichael, an engineering student who gets away from classes for practice only one day a week. He has been able to play from 40 to 50 minutes in each of the Red Raiders' games.

One baseball writer on the American league's most valuable player committee ranked Joe Gordon fifth, Ted Williams sixth.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND by DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

NOT ONLY A FIGHTER, BUT ALSO A DIPLOMAT

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower has a lot of tough jobs in Africa, and one of them, which doesn't get into the headlines, is to be the diplomatic negotiator among high French officials.

Among other things, he has been very adroit in handling General Giraud, who escaped from France dressed as an old woman and who now is in command of French forces in North Africa.

Actually, General Giraud expected to be commander of all forces in North Africa, both French and American. He is one of the highest generals in the French army, and before France fell, would have replaced General Gamelin as chief of staff had he not been taken prisoner. Therefore, since he outranks Eisenhower and has had much more varied experience, it is not unnatural that Giraud should aspire to be commander-in-chief of the entire North African operation, including the U. S. army.

Eisenhower, however, has a charming personality, a broad grin, a smattering of French, and had little trouble in handling General Giraud.

Another complication was the fact that Giraud hates Admiral Darlan. Yet Darlan, as a member of the cabinet, outranks him. In addition, there is General Nogues, another top-ranking officer. So it has been worked out that Nogues commands the French civil population, Giraud the French army, and Darlan the French fleet.

SIDETRACKED PLANES

When Wendell Willkie conferred with Stalin in Moscow, the Russian leader was critical of the British for sidetracking American lend-lease goods in Scotland and substituting for them inferior British war supplies.

The inside story of this can now be told.

Last summer, a shipment of Airacobras was en route to Russia from the United States and the convoy stopped to refuel in the British Isles. At that time, General Eisenhower, preparing for the second front in Africa, asked that these fast fighting planes be given to him instead of being sent on to Russia.

General Eisenhower was so insistent that he finally went to Prime Minister Churchill personally, who finally agreed that the Airacobras be sidetracked for use on the forthcoming African front.

OVERRULING ROOSEVELT

More and more it looks as if Ferdinand Eberstadt, the Wall Street broker, is becoming the most powerful man in the War Production board and one of the most powerful in the government. It hasn't leaked out yet, but recently he managed to overrule the vice president of the United States, the undersecretary of state, and Lend-Lease Administrator Ed Stettinius.

Some time ago, Eberstadt appointed as chief of WPB export priorities, Major Tom Armstrong, of Standard Oil of New Jersey, who had operated in various Latin American countries. Armstrong had been vigorous in bucking the development of Latin American government-owned oil companies, and the Latin Americans don't like him. Therefore, they squawked when they heard he would now sit in their all-important priorities position where he could decide whether they could, or could not, receive oil equipment to develop their government-owned industries in competition with Standard and private companies.

Undersecretary of State Welles agreed with the Latin Americans, and protested to the President. So did Vice President Wallace of the BEW, and also Stettinius, who buys lend-lease oil equipment for Latin American governments.

As a result of these protests, Roosevelt ordered Donald Nelson to dismiss Major Armstrong. However, Eberstadt in effect has overruled the President. He insisted that Armstrong remain. And he is still on the job.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Mrs. Roosevelt, looking from an airplane on the new marble structure known as the Jefferson Memorial, remarked, "I doubt if Jefferson would have liked to see money spent that way."

There are already 225,000 applications on file for commissions from civilian life.

Except for a few rare specialists, the only route to a commission nowadays is to get into the army as a private, then attend an officer candidates school.

Not to be stalled by lack of gasoline, one sightseeing company in Washington has hired and repainted an old two-horse ten-passenger wagon, which drives around the capital as "Victory Sightseeing."

Warning that the war department will dispense no more "cellophane commissions," Secretary Stimson says it does no good for applicants to write appealing letters to him, which open with the catch phrase, "I know what a busy man you are, but—"

Some people write to Stimson at his home, expecting personal attention.

Up to This Time Judge Had Not Been Suspected

A man was being tried in the local court for misappropriating a pig, and a conscientious witness, to whom the accused was said to have confided, was on the stand, being examined.

"Now then, can you repeat the exact words in which the prisoner confessed to you to taking the pig?" asked the counsel.

"He said, sir, that he took the pig," replied the witness.

The judge tried to simplify the question: "Did the prisoner say, 'He took the pig,' or did he say, 'I took the pig?'"

"Oh, no, your honor, he said that he took it. Your honor's name wasn't even mentioned."
